PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The Undergraduate Diploma in Global Fashion Design is a 60 ECTS program that provides participants with the techniques to design and create wearable fashion collections, while responding to the changing needs of international fashion and luxury industries. Fashion designers are the inspiration for creative ideas and new trends, not only in clothing but also in fabric development. They create collections based on an informed analysis of materials and fabrics in connection with art, design, creativity, and fashion. Starting with techniques typical of fashion design and illustration, this course addresses the analysis of fabrics and clothing manufacturing, as well as the history of dress, concluding with a final portfolio of work all embracing the modern age technologies and with an ethical approach to fashion.
